

Victoria holds a Master's Degree in Public Administration & Policy from the University of Montana Alexander Blewett III School of Law. She has published papers in both the U.S. and in Greece observing rural honors education, student food insecurity, and equitable hiring policies at institutions of higher education. She has been involved with ATINER since 2018 where she has attended conferences, given presentations, and serves as a member on the Board of Reviewers.

Throughout her graduate studies, Victoria worked at the University of Montana's Davidson Honors College where she advised and mentored honors students. Throughout her work, she grew a deep passion for supporting students from diverse backgrounds, and ensuring equitable opportunities for students. Victoria has recently been awarded a William J. Fulbright research grant, where she will continue her work with ATINER to better understand Greek students' attitudes towards higher education. Through analysis and development, she hopes that her research will encourage Greek policymakers to create policy that supports students from underrepresented areas throughout the country to create more equitable opportunities for success for all students seeking higher education.
